Biography

Cole White is a commercial litigation and insurance defense attorney in Pennsylvania.

Prior to joining Fields Howell, Cole served as a law clerk in the mass torts division at a national law firm in Philadelphia, where he prepared complaints, drafted discovery requests, conducted legal research, and wrote internal memoranda. He also worked as a Certified Legal Intern with the Bucks County District Attorney's Office, where he represented the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in approximately forty preliminary hearings each week, presenting arguments and evidence before magisterial district judges, and negotiating plea agreements with criminal defense counsel.

Cole earned his Juris Doctor from Temple University James E. Beasley School of Law in 2025. There he was a recipient of the Harriet Robinson Gillock Memorial Award, a Note/Comment Editor of the Temple Law Review, Vol. 97 Editorial Board, president of the Christian Legal Society, a member of the Sports Law Contract Negotiation Team, and a participant of Temple's nationally acclaimed Integrated Trial Advocacy Program. He earned his undergraduate degree from the Pennsylvania State University with a Bachelor of Science in Biobehavioral Health. There, he was a recipient of the J. Wood Platt Caddie Trust Scholarship awarded by the Golf Association of Philadelphia. Cole is admitted to the State Bar of Pennsylvania.
